

Yosef Abramowitz

President and Co-Founder

Yosef Abramowitz, an Israeli-American human rights activist, educator and entrepreneur, is President and CEO of Energija Global Capital, an impact investment platform that advances the environmental and humanitarian goals of providing affordable green power to underserved populations. Nominated three times for the Nobel Peace Prize, Abramowitz is recognized as a pioneer of the solar energy industry in Israel and East Africa. He was named by CNN as one of the six top global “Green Pioneers,” by PV Tech as one of the world’s most inspiring solar CEOs and by the Israel National Business and Energy Conference as “Person of the Year.” Co-founder of the Arava Power Company, a leading Israeli solar developer, Abramowitz was named three times to the Jerusalem Post’s list of 50 most influential Jews worldwide and the “Forward 50.” His life’s work was featured on CNN’s “The Next List” with Dr. Sanjay Gupta.
